Risk Grade 3 — June 2026

Investment Objective

To achieve long-term growth through a fixed weight portfolio utilising collective investments across various asset classes. There will be no additional restrictions on any particular geographical area or any economic or industrial sector. There is no guarantee that a positive return will be delivered.

Comparative Performance Measurement

The composite benchmark for this portfolio is constructed as follows:
35% IA Mixed Investment 40-85% Shares NR,
50% IA UK Gilt NR, 10% IA Direct and Hybrid
Property NR, 5% IA £ Corporate Bond NR.

Investment Report

Geopolitical tensions eased in Q2 2026 as news broke of a US/Iran ceasefire agreement together with a memorandum of understanding which had been signed by both parties. Pressure on energy prices lifted with both Brent and WTI falling back to around $70 a barrel. Investor sentiment dramatically improved as concerns surrounding continued disruption to energy supplies faded.

Keir Starmer resigned as Prime Minister in June, opening the way for Andy Burnham's ascension, following his return to the House of Commons. The avoidance of a protracted leadership battle was received positively by the gilt market with a slight drop in yields. The Bank of England kept rates static, signifying that an improved labour market and weaker economic growth should help keep inflation under control in the near term. UK equities posted gains, although the upside was capped due to declines in the energy sector as oil prices declined.

The portfolio's core fund, WS Resilient MM Balanced Managed returned +13.76% in Q2, outperforming its benchmark, the IA Mixed Investment 40-85% Shares by +4.22%. During the period the manager made two changes, firstly selling down exposure to high yield bonds in favour of gold & silver miners and bullion. The current outlook for this looks extremely attractive due to limited supply and central bank buying which is about to ramp up again.

In addition, the weighting to Chinese equities was cut in order to invest in agricultural commodities which we expect to experience price rises due to fertiliser shortages. Harvest problems are also expected in the Americas as a super El Nino begins later this year. Within the portfolio's satellite, the manager made no asset allocation or fund selection changes to the portfolio's satellite during the last quarter, comfortable with the equity exposure and short duration fixed income. During Q2 the portfolio returned +6.31, outperforming its benchmark by +1.45%.

Although the Iran conflict appears to be undergoing a process of de-escalation, it underscores the vulnerability of global energy and trade networks. The longer-term fall-out on energy and fertiliser availability will become clearer in Q3 and this may well result in additional volatility. However, the AI infrastructure build-out looks set to continue and should support growth and keep the demand for capital high. Ultimately, I expect a positive quarter, but with more subdued returns and not without periods of volatility.

Investor sentiment dramatically improved as concerns surrounding continued disruption to energy supplies faded.

In the UK we saw Keir Starmer's resignation, and the Bank of England's decision to keep rates static for the time being. UK equities posted gains, although the upside was capped due to declines in the energy sector as oil prices declined. European equities fared somewhat better due to higher exposure to tech and AI related companies, meanwhile the European Central Bank was forced to hike rates to combat heightened inflation. US equities performed strongly, driven by continued AI enthusiasm and a more upbeat outlook for domestic growth and inflation.

Investment Report

Geopolitical tensions eased in Q2 2026 as news broke of a US/Iran ceasefire agreement together with a memorandum of understanding which had been signed by both parties. Pressure on energy prices lifted with both Brent and WTI falling back to around $70 a barrel. Investor sentiment dramatically improved as concerns surrounding continued disruption to energy supplies faded.

European equities fared well due to relatively high exposure to tech and AI related companies. US equities were driven by continued AI enthusiasm and a more upbeat outlook for domestic growth and inflation. In Japan, hawkish monetary policy, a weak yen, and strong results propelled gains. Asia's top performers were South Korea and Taiwan as AI related demand sharply increased. Indian equities began a tentative recovery following a particularly brutal re-rating, and China lagged as mixed economic data failed to inspire investors.

The portfolio's core fund, WS Resilient MM Balanced Managed returned +13.76% in Q2, outperforming its benchmark, the IA Mixed Investment 40-85% Shares by +4.22%. During the period the manager made two changes, firstly selling down exposure to high yield bonds in favour of gold & silver miners and bullion. The current outlook for this looks extremely attractive due to limited supply and central bank buying which is about to ramp up again.

In addition, the weighting to Chinese equities was cut in order to invest in agricultural commodities which we expect to experience price rises due to fertiliser shortages. Harvest problems are also expected in the Americas as a super El Nino begins later this year. Within the portfolio's satellite, the manager made no asset allocation or fund selection changes to the portfolio's satellite during the last quarter, comfortable with the equity exposure and short duration fixed income. During Q2 the portfolio returned +11.36%.

Although the Iran conflict appears to be undergoing a process of de-escalation, it underscores the vulnerability of global energy and trade networks. The longer-term fall-out on energy and fertiliser availability will become clearer in Q3 and this may well result in additional volatility. However, the AI infrastructure build-out looks set to continue and should support growth and keep the demand for capital high. Ultimately, we expect a positive quarter, but with more subdued returns and not without periods of volatility.
